XP recognizes that it is an 'Android Phone' and wants to install a driver, but does not have a driver and I can not locate one. I want to move photos and music content, but while the 'units' on the Android tablet are shown in Win Explorer I can copy to them or work with them anyway. Now it's time to connect the device to which you installed the driver. Open the device manager and see the list of drivers when a device will connect it will reflect here in the device manager list. This means that you have successfully installed the driver. if you are facing a yellow mask in the other driver list, it means that you have not installed the appropriate driver.
